DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

The Crother's House c. 1860-1879 is a 2nd story frame hall/parlor farmhouse, 2 bays across by one deep. A 2 bay addition was added to the west gable end. A late 19th or early 20th Century shed roof porch is found on the south and east sides. A 20th Century single story shed addition 1 bay x 1 bay is attached to the west gable end. The house is found at the end of a long road and rests on a small rise. The main gable runs east/west with the main facade fronting south.

The entire structure rests on an uncoursed fieldstone foundation except for the shed addition which has a block footing. The house is partially sheathed with typical weather-board siding. The exposed areas, not protected by a porch, have been covered over with aluminum siding. The steeply pitched slate roof has boxed cornices and extended eaves at the ends, which are covered with aluminum. Stuccoed brick chimney stacks protrude at the gable ends and in the center of the house.

The fenestration is basically symmetrical. 6/6 sashes are found on the first floor, however, the second floor windows have had 1/1 sash replacements set in. The window trim is plain. There is one 4 panel door on the main facade.

^{Sawn}
~~Victorian~~ turnposts support the porch and the posts rest on poured concrete slab with a block footing. The north side has an exterior cellar entry.

The interior of this house is extremely plain with undecorated ^{boards}~~boards~~ outlining doors and windows. Inclosed stairs have vertically beaded board doors. The west wall of the hall/parlor section has a large plain mantel piece. The simple board shelf is supported by an unarticulated frieze and plain vertical supports. The second floor was not open for inspection.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

The Crother's farmhouse appears on the Lake Atlas (1877) under the name A. Crothers. The house has not probably changed a great deal since the late 19th century. The interior, although plain is basically how it was constructed. The house is the only one in the general area and undoubtedly the one associated with the farm land nearby.
